INDIANA ITEMS.

Mitchell has voted forty thousand dollars to the Rockport and Northern Central Railroad.

The New Albany sow attempted to eat another child on Saturday. Her owner has been advised to confine her, to prevent any further unpleasantness.

A Mr. Wilson, of Madison, in helping a drunken man into a wagon, on Saturday, tripped and fell, striking his forehead on a sharp flagging stone, injuring him seriously.

Little Dickey Boyle, of Evansville, wound a string around his finger, tied it to a grape arbor, and started to run. Little Dickey Boyle, when he counts his phalanges, finds one of them missing.

Mrs. N. Spickert, of Mooresville, attempted suicide on Saturday, at the house of her father, in Greenville, Floyd county. She is not expected to recover. This is her third attempt at suicide, and was caused by religious excitement.

Mr. Samuel Walker, of New Albany, was badly scorched on Saturday at the laboratory of Dr. Jenkins, at Louisville, by accidentally dropping some melted wax into a barrel of alcohol. The fluid ignited, burning his face considerably, and singeing his hair and eye-

The City Council of Evansville has voted an dection on the proposition to take three hundred thousand dollars stock in the Evansville and Indianapolis Straight Line Railroad, and to contract with W. C. Weir and the Holly Manufacturing Company to furnish the Holly water works for one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars.

Union Saloon in Rockfield, Carroll county, was struck by lightning on Saturday, and three men named Wilson, Guinup, and Tafe were severely if not fatally injured. The front of the building was torn to pieces, and the porch, under which the men were seated, was demolished and set on fire. Guinup had most of his clothing tern off, and his shoes were found some distance away torn to shreds. Tafe was badly injured about the shoulders, and is not expected to recover. Wilson is also in a precarious condition.

The Brazil Miner says: From present indications there is not much probability of a speedy adjustment of the matters in the difference between the miners and employers. Most of the banks-or at least those that are favorably situated for that kind of work-have gone to "stripping" coal, and it is hoped by this means to keep the furnaces in this vicinity in operation. However, the "strike" is proving ruinous, not only to miners and proprietors of banks, but to almost every business interest in and about Brazil. We hope-although it is hoping against hope that the "strike" will not be of long duration.

Mr. George Finch, a farmer residing near Evansville, unable to procure white harvest hands, employed two colored men to assist him in securing his grain. At this some of his neighbors took offense, and during the night cut the belts of his reaping machine, thereby rendering it useless. Mr. F. then hired a number of negroes with cradles to gather his crop, but these were driven away by a party of twenty men, and the crop will be a total loss. The legal remedy will be at once applied, and as some of the men engaged in the affair are amply able to pay the damages, Mr. Finch will not probably be the loser by the foolish and lawless proceedings. Both political parties are represented in the affair, Mr. F. being a Democrat.

How a Quack Mill is Run. A New York correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial tells how a quack makes his money, as follows: There is one Broadway consumption curer and cure-all doctor, whose annual income for years past has been between $100,000 and $125,000. He has constantly an average of between four and five thousand patients, located all over the country, most of who communicate with him by letter, and to whom he communicates advice and perscriptions by post and express. His establishment is regularly organized, and is kept constantly running, though he himself is absent more than half of the time in other cities, where he has other establishments. His letters from patients number over a hundred a day, and he has about a dozen men and women engaged in reading, classifying and answering them, and putting up the medicine for them.

The whole machine moves with regularity, though he himself never reads or answers any of the letters of his distressed but hopeful correspondents. There is no reason why he should know anyth ng of the cases. His clerks can attend to the business as well as himself. He has some half dozen or dozen medicines, two or more of which he administers for consumption and every sort of complaint; and

Conklin practices pugilism it seems. He has had masters famous in their line, and can fence and fib, and cut, and dub with the best of them. Every morning he arises from his chaste couch, and while yet in his nightclothes, that leaves his Senatorial legs exposed, and his Senatorial muscles of the arm free, for an hour he dances around a sack of bran suspended from the ceiling, hitting it right and left with great force, rapidity and precision. After this a couple of stout fellows rub the Senator down with crash towels and horse-brushes. This tremendous athlete of the Fogbank then descends to raw steak and porter. This fearful gladiator of the Senate is very fond of inviting any friend who may call upon him to a little trial with the gloves, and then amusing himself by administering dubs on the nose and in the eyes, or of upsetting his friends entirely. My friend Jones, a warm admirer of the curly-pated law maker, had this invitation to stand up and be punished until he found it fatiguing. So one day he introduced his friend Prine. Conklin practices pugilism it seems. He has until he found it fatiguing. So one day he introduced his friend Price. When invited to put on the gloves, as usual, he declined, but recommended his friend Price. Price was also reluctant, but consented. The Senator very kindly gave Price some instructions as to position and mode of striking out.

"Now hit me," cried the Sehator, dancing around Price

"I fear I shall hurt you," said Price. "Never mind me," continued the Senator, giving Price a stinger on the nose.
"Well, look out," snorted Price, very red in the face. The Senator tried to get one in on Price's peepers, when his arm was suddenly thrown up in an extraordinary manner. Price had caught it in the most awkward way, and gave it such a wrench that Conklin thought for a moment his arm was gone. While looking for it he got a most infernal whack between the eyes. The Senatorial beauty threw up his arms, and stumbling back, fell over a lounge, leaving nothing visible but his Senatorial legs, and there he lay, studying a new sort of astronomy that seemed to be made up of fireworks, while Jones cried "time." Conkey did not come to time, but when he did gather himself up, looking so extremely silly, Price said: "I beg your pardon, Mr. Senator. I thought you more experienced than you seem to be. I am an old hand at this sort of thing, having been brought up in the prize ring."

Conkey took off the gloves—had his bag of sand out down, and is not so much of an athlete as he used to be. Poor Conkey. As nothing evices that was made in vain. I support nothing exists that was made in vain, pose he has his uses—but then in vain does not mean vanity—[Don Piatt.

The Forest After a Fire. Not long ago the forest around Thunder. Bay, Lake Superior, was destroyed by fire for. a great distance. A letter to the Toronto Globe, from its correspondent with the Red River expedition, gives a description of the burnt district as it now appears: The change of appearance on either side of the road was so marked that, with the excep-tion of about four miles, I failed to recognize the country through which I passed. The great fire-mentioned in a former letter-had swept the country round about almost clear of green growth. The forests of pine that lined the road for mile after mile, stretching away as far as the eye could see, were gone; but among the charred logs, and round the sapless trunks, a new growth had sprung up, and advancing summer had opened buds, unfolded leaves, and covered the dark, dismal tracts of dead wood with waving, many colored leaves. Burnt grass and withered twigs had been replaced by acres of blossoming strawberry plants, thick clusters of wild roses, and variegated heaths. In some places the free had passed a tree or a clump of trees without harming them, while burning and destroying swept the country round about almost clear harming them, while burning and destroying everything around, and now these—generally beech trees—were one mass of bright, light-green leaves interlaced with the silver boughs from which they grew.

It was very curious to note the freaks of the le to account for the way in which it crossed certain spots here and there, passing certain trees as if they had been marked, like the lintels of the Israelitish doors. Sometimes a tract of several acres would appear round which the fire had burned in an area like that of a bended bow, and there were clumps of trees in which one or two perhaps had totally escaped, while others, black for thirty feet from the ground, were a mass of green leaves at the top. Here and there were places as drear and desolate as if the sun had ceased to shine upon them, the charred stumps still covering the land, and rising in grotesque, fantastic forms like distorted spectres, giving the place the appearance of a haunted, curse-stricken land; but the greater part of the road had undergone such a pleasant change that it seemed as if the curse had been removed and a blessing sent in its place.

Terrorism in Tennessee. John Ruhm, a resident of Nashville of five or six years' standing, held a note given for $75 by a man living near Brentwood. Ruhm placed this note in the hands of a constable there for collection, and told that officer that, if he had to bring suit, and there was any trouble, to notify him. Ruhm was notified that the matter would be contested. Greatly wondering what could be the defense to a plain note hand, given for a valuable conin the office of the Justice until the hour of grace had expired, and then asked for a judgment, no one appearing for defendant. The magistrate, pale and trembling, said he would not give judgment. "Why?" was inquired in blank astonishment. This was the answer: Defendant had been there early in the morning and told him (the Justice) "not to dare do it." "He had a revolver in his hand." "He is a man that it won't do to go against."
"Does he deny that he owes the debt?" "O no," was the reply, "but he told me not to give judgment against him. And right there where you sit, his brother killed a man on last Saturday." So Ruhm had to return home without his judgment.

Since then, the plaintiff has received word

Justin McCarthy tell how the American ashions appear to his English eyes, in the July Galaxy, as follows:

July Galaxy, as follows:

Opposite my windows is a fashionable church, and it is a wonderful sight on a sunny Sunday to see the congregation streaming out. Of course the majority of the worshipers are women, and they come fluttering forth in the brightest of silks all glittering and glowing and radiant colors. The pavement shimmers with crimson and violet and blue and emerald; there are white feathers, azure feathers, scarlet feathers shooting forth as many tints as "the peacock's spotted train—bright Argus's golden eye;" there are chains and necklaces and bracelets and brooches and carrings; the street is positively ablaze with color and lystre womanhood at all. And at church—even the uttermost devotees of fashion in Europe do keep up something like a semblance of de mureness and gravity, if not of sombreness and penitence, in their church-going garb.

Vassar College.

This excellent institution having, by the consent of the Legislature, expunged the word "female" from their title, goes still further in abolishing this distinctive appellation from their programmes. At the commencement exercises, there was not a "Miss" on the bills; but the Misses did their parts well simply as S. E. Hoskins, C. W. Rich, F. L. Hughes, E. R. Coffin, A. W. Woods, etc., etc. And why not? Everybody knows—and if they do not, it is time they did—that Vassar is a girls' college, and that they do not graduate anything but girls there, and mighty nice and accomplished girls, too, bless their hearts. And who ever heard of bulletining boy graduates as Mr. John Smith, Mr. William Jones, etc.?

An excellent feature of the College Catalogue is the absence of all sweet alliteratives; and the charming diminutive "ie," and all nicknames, such as Fannie, Sallie, and Jennie, are not to be found in the book. There was one Kitty, however, and thereby hangs a tale. When the edict went forth that the ladies should send in their real names, one young lady steadfastly refused to give her first name except as Kitty. Miss Lyman, the dignified and firm principal, sent for the delinquent and lady steadfastly refused to give her first name except as Kitty. Miss Lyman, the dignified and firm principal, sent for the delinquent and reasoned with her. The lady persisted and plead on the ground that the name was "too hateful and ridiculous" to be seen in print. "But, my child," said Miss Lyman, "it certainly can not be so bad as Keren-appuch?" The pupil burst into tears and admitted that that was the very name. Heramiable parents had tacked this attrocious appellation upon an unoffending daughter. Job did the same thing, and the Bible tells us how he was punished for such severity. It is needless to add that the Faculty relented and allowed "Kitty" to remain on the catalogne.—(New York Star.

Parepa-Rosa's Courtship.

A correspondent of the Chicago Republicar gives the following account of the courtship of the great prima donna and her diminutive

Parepa and Carl Rosa were going on the cars to New Haven to take part in a concert. The violinist was in a dejected mood, and, being asked the cause, told the charming singer that he had ill fortune in this country; that he was constantly losing his friends whatever he might do to retain them.

"Oh don't grieve; cheer up, my little man," said Parepa. "If you have lost friends you can find others. I'll be your friend, if you will let me. "Oh I shall be delighted. Will you indeed

Most cartainly, and I will be your wife, too, if you wish it."
At this juncture the small masician, who was entirely overcome with emotion, seized Parepa's plump hand, carried it to his lips, and the moment after disappeared in the liberal folds of her agitated wardrobe.

They were married a few days after, and they have been one of the happiest of married couples. Who will deny hereafter that, in joining contrasts, lieth love's delight?

The Effect of One Inconsiderate Action. "Down in Wilmington, some time ago, an old man who was very feeble, was helped across a crowded street by a youth of twenty. A month afterward the old man died, and as an expression of his gratitude he left the youth forty thousand dollars. And now an old man's life is safe in Wilmington. All the young fellows have had their ambition excited, and as soon as any venerable man appears on the sidewalk a dozen chaps rush at him, grab him by the trowsers and collar and the back hair, and try to carry him exercises. and try to carry him across the street whether he wants to go or not. When he gets there a lot more fasten on him and set him back old men are having a lovely time now, and they have got to tack up the street whenever they go out for a walk. Thus far very little cash has been evolved; but all the young men cash has been evolved; but all the young men study the obituary advertisements carefully and when they see the words, at the age of seventy-six or sixty-six, or anywhere in that neighborhood, they hurry down to the office of the Register of Wills and pore over the last testament of the deceased. All this goes testament of the deceased. All this goes to show how much distress one inconsiderate action will cause."

Forgot to Swim.

An Irishman working on a steamboat at the Monongahela wharf fell overboard into deep water. Several of his acquaintances saw his mishap, but laughed at it as a good joke, knowing that the involuntary diver was a good swimmer Their consternation was great, however, when, instead of swimming straight to the shore he commenced flounders. great, however, when, instead of swimming straight to the shore, he commenced floundering like a mired horse. In his fright he had entirely forgotten that he could swim, and and would inevitably have drowned if he had not, by lunatically tossing his hands about, caught hold of the heavy hawser of the boat. There he held and yelled like a catamount, although he was out of danger and could see prompt preparations making to get him ashore. A plank large enough to float a twenty inch gun was run out to him, but it was ashore. A plank large enough to hoat a twenty inch gun was run out to him, but it was only after much persuasion that he would leave the rope and trust himself to the plank. At last, still yelling, he was drawn to the shore, amid the acclamations of two or three hundred people whem his vocalizations had drawn to the place. His explanation of his halplessness was somewhat illegical as this helplessness was somewhat illogical as this:

A New Way to Pay Old Debts

A New Way to Pay Old Bebts.

The President has received from an individual belonging in California a plan for paying off immediately the public debt. He proposes a grand international exhibition, to be held in some one of the centrally located cities, during the last year of President Grant's administration. One thousand million tickets, at five dollars each, in gold or silver coin, to be inseed. The sum of two thousand millions of at five dollars each, in gold or silver coin, to be issued. The sum of two thousand millions of dollars is to be distributed as gifts, in sums ranging from one hundred dollars up to five hundred millions of dollars; the remainder, after paying expenses, to be applied to the extinction of the debt, and the building of a magnificent national expitol in the most central part of the country. He assures the President that it would be a success; that it would raise us materially in the eyes of the world, and that sovereigns would deem us the most pregressive people in the world, and would exclaim, "Great are the people of the United States of America!"

Djamond Cut Diamond,

A curious story is told "on the street" con-cerning the recent encounter between the Erie managers and Commodore Vanderbilt, in which the Commodore put down freight in so determined and, indeed, reckless a manner.

It is said that Messrs. Gould and Fisk, some time ago, foreseeing a rise in the price of breadstuffs, purchased a very large quantity of wheat in Chicago. The price rose as they anticipated; and the time came for them to ship their wheat to market. They determined to save something on their frieght, and thereupon, it is said, began the struggle with Vanderbilt. The Commodore, who was in earnest, put down freight on the Central road, with a savage determination to show those Erie fellows that they must not trifle with him."

The result was, if the tale is true, that Gould and Fish magnanimously sent all their wheat over the Central railroad at the Com-modore's reduced freight.

A Heavy Dose.

That all the people in California are not competent to write for the Overland Monthly, is proved by the following true history: The wife of a farmer being sick, her physician ordered some powder largely composed of opium, and directed her husband to administer the weight of a quarter eagle at a dose. In the morning, when the doctor returned the patient was dead, and evidently of poison.

"Unhappy man," said the doctor, "where is the powder I gave you?"

"I gave it to her. Here is the empty box."

"You forgot my perscription, then."

"No, doctor. I put the two dollars and a half in one scale and the powder in the other.

"Was it in gold?"

"Was it in gold?"
"No; I did not have the gold, so I made up the amount in silver.'

Would Sing It.

A story is told of an old clergyman who had the most unbounded faith in Wattis's hymn-book. He was fond of saying that he could never open to any page without finding an appropriate hymn. A mischievous son of his thought it would be a good joke to test his father's faith. So he took an old song and pasted it on one of the pages of the book, over a hymn, so nicely that it could not be easily detected. At church, on Sabbath morning, the minister happened to open at that very page, and commenced to read:

"Old Grimes is dead."

"Old Grimes is dead." There was a sensation in the audience. He There was a sensation in the audience. He looked at the choir and they looked at him; but such was his faith in Watts's hymns that he undertook it again, commencing with the same line. There was another sensation in the audience. Looking at it again, and then at the congregation, and then at the choir, said he, "Brethren, it is here in the regular order in Watts's hymn-book, and we will a ng it any how."

Drell Consolation.

Christian IX. "by the grace of God King of Denmark, the Vandals and Goths, Duke of Sleswick, Holstein, Stormarn, Ditmarsch, Lauenborg and Oldenborg." writes to his "beloved and faithful subjects in the Islands of St. Thomas and St. John's," to announce to them that the projects of selling them to the United States has fallen through. It is awkward to a king, says the New York Evening Post, to congratulate his subjects on the fact that he has not been able to get rid of them for a con-sid-er-a-tion, for he can hardly avoid telling them that he did try to sell them. He thought, it seems, that the sale of the islands would ease the burdens of Denmark; he now congratulates their inhabitants that the convention or agreement to sell "has become void." On this we of the United States may also congratulate ourselves.

How Not to Get Fat.

Schneider's regimen for preventing extreme corpulence consists almost entirely of meats rich in nitrogen; but to moderate the excitement to the system produced by such a diet, vegetables containing no starch are permitted. Among the forbidden things are sugar, butter, cheese, potatoes, pie, ices, rice, liquors, beans, peas, lentils, sago, arrowroot, tapioca, macaroni, and all hot drinks. Rhine wines, Bordeaux, sherry, Maderia, are recommended. Beer is forbidden, and port, brandy and rum permitted in a moderate degree.

Slightly Hard of Hearing. A story is told of an old lady who lived next door to the Navy Yard at Potsmouth, in New Hampshire, and who had the misfortune to be hard of hearing. Last Fourth of July she sat in her parlor, while the boys in the Navy Yard fired a salute of thirty-six heavy guns. As the last sixty-eight-pounder went off, the old lady started up in her chair, and called out, "Come in."

NEW YORK CITY and county owe thirty millions of dollars, and yet it is stated that the annual taxes levied and collected in New York exceed its total indebtedness. The greater part of the taxes are used up in jobs, in plain English, stolen. It is a nice place for a man who has money to live, but it is a this amount is to be invested in United States great deal nicer for a man who has none.

A Washington dispatch says the opinion prevails with a large number of members of of the soldier upon entering the institution, both Houses of Congress, that it will be impossible to finish up the business now before The Soldiers' Home at Knightstown is supthem by the 15th of July, the time fixed upon ported by our own State, but the managers of for final adjournment, and that it will be necessary to make an extension of possibly the meeting of the last Legislature to have it The House will be ready, but the Senate is backward, there being no abatement of the inclination to talk in that august ought, in our opinion, to have been done, and body.

A Parisian Swindle.

The older a people become, the more frugal and economical are they in the use of food. It is reserved to Western people to waste more than would support a New England family, and the same comparison can be made between the latter and a French or German family. Carefulness in saving what, with us, would be thrown away, has enriched many people. It is in Paris, perhaps, that this economy is carried to its greatest extreme, and the ingenuity employed in devising new methods of economy, is wonderful. A neat swindle has just been perpetrated there by grocers, who, procuring a quantity of refuse potatoes, the smallest and cheapest obtainable, had them trodden under foot in tubs of water until their skins were worn off and they looked fresh and new. Then doing them up nicely in paper they were sold as "early Bermudas." The same thing was done here a couple of years since, but in a different way. Our grocers, not caring to bother with the little ones, picked out good sized articles and peeled the skin off with a chemical prepsration. It was very profitable for awhile, but it cost a great deal more money than the French plan, b sides wasting a great deal.

Is She Genuine?

"George Washington's body servant" is fellow we all know. How often we have recorded his death and detailed his virtues! In how many different places have we known him, and what cheerful reminiscences he tells pleasantry, to pass himself off as having been body servant" to Jefferson also. But he never can do that very well. There is a these peculiarities make the society of American description. stamps him as having been connected only ive to a visitor and a foreigner, who, having with the immortal George, and while we might wink at his story we always know he is more fortunate than in any country in the lying just a little, and pass it by out of regard world. I cannot adequately describe how for his old master. The "body servant" still strange and delightful I found this gental and lives—it is impossible that he should be I do not know why it is that, where so many dead—but where we can't tell just now. The last time we heard from him he had just died in Misson i; the time before that he was in in most American circles, whether of town or Oregon. We look for him in Maine next, or in Minnesota, for we are satisfied he has gone be left to the wife, the sisters or the daugh- Londonderry, N. H., and was upward of 90 to a dryer climate. Wherever he may be we ters. wish him well. We are not quite yet pre- power, she "amounts to" far more, in this pared, however, to welcome into our regard the "body servant" of General Washington's mother, who has lately been discovered in Texas in the person of a Mrs. Bee, aged one hundred and thirty-three years. She has the family trait-that of dying-but it will take she is the genuine article. Her reminiscences are detailed in the usual interesting manner, and look well, but still we are doubtful. We ed, the woman seems to me to have her commend her, however, to our readers, and hope she may turn out as great a treasure as her mistress' son's servant has done.

The Sufferings of a Lunatic.

James McManus abides on East Fortysixty street, in that modern Sodom, New York. James is a lunatic. At least he was yesterday. The heat probably caused congestion of the brain. He became insanc. His insanity took the form of homicidal mania. The last glimmer of reason departed just after he selected his wife as the object upon which the mania his wife as the object upon which the mania should expend itself. He commenced quarreling with her. He became totally, yes, madly insane. He drew a pistol, which he had procured with the expectation of becoming insane, and with the expectation of becoming insane, and with the usual impetuosity of a lunear set of the commenced firing at her. She retired to shadowy to call them silver-gray. Gay sprites of changeful them silver-gray. Gay sprites of changeful them silver-gray. Gay sprites of changeful them silver-gray is called them silver-gray is called them silver-gray. Gay sprites of changeful them silver-gray is called them silver-gra sane, and with the usual impetuosity of a lunatic commenced firing at her. She retired from his presence with what seemed to him unnecessary haste. She ran down a flight of stairs. In his mania he pursued, firing as he went. Four times did he shoot, and four times did he miss the wife of his bosom. But he did not have a mania for nothing. One of the bullets entered an opposite dwelling. In that dwelling, lying in bed, was a Mrs. Fitzgibbon. Guided by the malicious mania the bullet struck hier in the back. It took effect, indeed it inflicted a bad wound. Mrs. Fitzgibbon was disturbed in her slumbers. She screamed and alarmed the neighborhood. screamed and alarmed the neighborhood. James had not yet been able to find his wife, James had not yet been able to find his wife, but he had emptied his pistol. His homicidal mania was going off. He told them he was becoming sane again, and probably wouldn't do it only more. But the people were fools. They know nothing of the workings of a sensitive beain; they did not understand science. They were coarse, ignorant creatures, with hig feet and red hands. They refused to hear the poor afflicted McManus; they refused to bathe his head in ice, fan him and give him cooling drinks until he should be returned to his normal condition. No, they hustled him off to a dirty jail, and all along the way made unfecling remarks, and hoped he would catch it, that his neck would be stretched, that the doctors would cut him up. And there James nappreciated and misunderstood by the cold world, pines away. Poor man! how can men be so cruel as to deprive him of his liber-

Soldier's Homes,

General Butler, who is President of the Na tional Asylum for disabled soldiers, has reently been accused of corruption in its management, and has been giving a Congressional committee a full exhibit of the receipts and expenditures of the institution since its organization. From the full explanation of the financial management of the institution which General Butler presented, it appears that it has already received about four millions of dollars. Of this amount all but about one and a half million has been expended for purchase of sites, erection of buildings and the maintenance of disabled soldiers for five years. There are now three asylums, one at Dayton, Ohio, (which is the largest), one at Augusta, Maine, and one at Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Buildings for an additional asylum are to be erected in the Southern States, for the treatment of pulmonary complaints, where a mild climate is necessary. General Butler expects to receive about four million dollars more, when all the' army accounts are settled, and bonds, the interest of which is to be used to support the asylums. The fund is obtained in various ways, but chiefly by the assignment of his bounty and pension, if entitled to one. the national institution made an effort during merged with the Dayton establishment, there- hisn. by relieving the State of all expense. Dedication of a Soldiers' Monument. GREENCASTLE, IND., June 27, 1870. To the Editor of The News:

It is ascertained that nearly three hundred and fifty Putnam county soldiers perished in the war for suppressing the late rebellion. Their surviving comrades and the patriotic people of the county have just completed a monument to these, upon which their names, as far as known, are inscribed.

This monument it is proposed to dedicate, with appropriate ceremonies, on next Saturday, July 2d. It is intended to make the meeting worthy of the occasion. Governor Baker will preside, and Colonel Dick Thompson and General Lew Wallace will deliver orations.

The committee of soldiers having charge of the affair are sparing no pains to make the tion of the Kingdom of Saxony show that proceedings a success. Half-fare arrangements will be made with all the railroads, the services of music and artillery have been secured, and arrangements made to have on the grounds the battle flag of every regiment in ence. The earth rolled into this dark crater which a Putnam county company served.

Distinguished citizens from all parts of the State will be present and participate in the exercises, and it is confidently expected that from other States some will come to join us in honoring appropriately our glorious dead. G. C. M.

Sunset in Salt Lake Valley.

Nothing in Italy could far surpass the loveliness of the scenery down the valley. The sunset that flushed the hills, and struck a tremulous highway of pearl athwart the western sky-who shall describe it! All respectable mountains, of course, are purple. No poet was ever yet daring enough to suggest that far-off hills should take on any other tint. But these hills that sottly girt the lazy waters of the lake, were a compromise of fawn and violet, scarce dusky enough for royal purple, and just too shadowy to call

The Man of Fate.

When I was dead, my spirit turned
To seek the much-frequented house:
I passed the door, and saw my friends
Feasting beneath green orange boughs.
From hand to hand they pushed the wine,
They sucked the pulp of plum and peach
They sang, they jested, and they laughed,
For each was loved of each.

I listened to their honest chat;
Said one: "To-morrow we shall be
Plodding alone the featureless sands.
And coasting miles and miles of sea.
Said one: "Eefore the turn of tide
We will achieve the eyry-seat."
Said one: "To-morrow shall be like
To-day, but much more sweet."

"To-morrow," said they, strong with hope,
And dwelt upon the pleasant way;
"To-morrow," cried they, one and all,
While no one spoke of yesterday.
Their life stood full at blessed noon:
I, only I, had passed away;
"To-morrow and to-day," they cried:
I was of yesterday.

I shivered comfortless, but 'ast No chill across the table-cloth; I, all forgotten, shivered, sad To stay, and yet to part how loath! I passed from the familiar room, I from whom love had passed away, Like the remembrance of a guest That tarrieth but a day.

The Mystery. Nothing further has yet been developed in reference to the horrible crime of Friday, but the excitement continues intense, and a thousand rumors are prevalent. The facts are simply as stated by us yesterday; there is nothing new. One of the stories told yesterday, and which gained credence, was that the oldor fifteen thousand dollars, and that she had been put out of the way by persons who would in charge about two hundred dollars, and State of Missouri which were created about the commencement of the war, and it is not probable that any one would have killed the girls for such a sum. The Sentinel says that the father of the eldest child was several years since in the grocery business on the Bluff Road, and about five years ago was accidentally burned to death. She has two aunts in this city, named Early and Nicholson, and an uncle in the Insane Hospital. Some time since a lawsuit existed on their part against Mr. Kelley for the guardianship of the child, which, however, was decided in favor of the latter, the father having expressed a wish that she should be under his care. As will be seen by the Mayor's proclamation in another column, the city has offered one thousand dollars reward for the detection of the criminals. The County Commissioners have offered two hundred and fifty dollars, and we understand that Mr. Kelley has added three hundred dollars. We hope no effort will be spared to ferret out the guilty wretches.

Words and Their Abuses,

Mr. Thurlow Weed, in an entertaining article in the Galaxy for May, sheds some long desired light on the origin of the term "governor," as employed by filial affection to de-note the paternal parent. On reading this we were instantly reminded of a little bit of historical philology which Mr. Froude has somehow strangely omitted to chronicle in that portion of his delightful romance which is founded on the life of Elizabeth. This somewhat distinguished lady, in company with Mrs. Stowe, Grace Darling, Raleigh, Dr. Franklin and others, was once taking tea by special invitation in the back parlor at Kentinguished. lworth, when the conversation turned on

Raleigh, who from his experience was quite at home on that topic. playfully wagered his best peaked ruff that Leicester could not prevail on either of the ladies there present to venture with him on the lake in his new tenoared lap streak wherry. The Earl was roughly piqued by this taunt, being secretly proud of his aquatic accomplishments, and turning hastily to the Queen he remarked— "And yet the lady lives who ventures where soever I may lead."

"Prithee, brave Earl," interrupted the Queen, in high dudgeon, "will you impart to us her name?"
An awkward pause ensued, when Leicester fixing his aquiline eye piercingly upon Eliza-beth's face, replied in a tone of the deepest respect, "you Bet!"

This expression has ever since held its place as a maxim of polite conversation.—[Punchi-

Where Would Christ go to Meeting

To-day? New York, it is unnecessary to point out, is not Jerusalem, new or old; and New England is not Palestine, Habits and modes of life differ widely in the East and the West; and if Jesus were born to-day in the United States, his cosume and habit of life could not be those of the Savior of Nazareth. But allowing for all differences of the climate and fowing for all differences of the crimate and the the age and the civilization, if Christ and his disciples were to appear in New York to-day, into what church could they go and feel at home? What service could they join in. from what pulpit could they acceptably preach—those very plain, homely men, who went about on all days, lifting up the he poorest and humblest into the sweet at derly, the meek and profound and elegantly attired saints and sinners to prayer, Christ and St. Paul and St. John would likely be down by the wharves, speaking to here and there a crowd of ragged outcasts, or comforting some fallen woman, or encouraging some broken down man, and leaving everywhere an impression of the salvation that has to come into the world for all men.—[Charles Disraeli's Defense of the Jews. In his Life of Bentinck, Disraeli devotes a chapter to the defense of his race—and it is the most terse logical, complete, and sweeping defense ever made of the Jews. Every ing decease ever made overy paragraph is an argument. New facts are presented with telling force, and old facts are shown in strikingly new relations. No man can read it without feeling a new reverence for the mysterious race which ages of persecution and obloquy have failed to repress, or without a new respect for the man who stands up so valiantly for the faith and historical greatness of his fathers, while yielding a frank and full assent to the Divine humanity of the Lord, and regretting that a great portion of the Jewish race "should not believe in the most important part of the Jewish religion."

And thus he sums up his reverential faith in his people: "The Jewish race connects the his people: "The Jewish race connects the modern populations with the early ages of the world, when the relations of the Creator with the created were more intimate than in thes days; when angles visited the earth, and God himself even spoke with man. They are a living and the most striking evidence of the falsity of that pernicious doctrine of modern times—the natural equality of man.

A Fly in Amber. The lively lady correspondent of the Chica-go Journal, writing from Salt Lake City under the name of "Amber," photographs Brigham Young as follows: Brigham is a hale old gentleman of sixty nine sweet summers. His complexion is florid; his eye restless, shrewd and blue; his mouth sinister and somewhat full-lipped. He is stort, thick-set, and plainly dressed; very courteous in deportment, and remarkably quick-eyed and watchful. His chief counselor, a descendant of the Prophet Leant in descendant of the Prophet Joseph, is a grea dabby-faced infant of three score years, ev flabby-faced infant of three score years, evidently most completely under Brigham's thumb. The old gentleman has a horror of correspondents, reporters, etc., since the traitorous heel they consider turned against them by Anna Dickinson, and is rather close mouthed. He did say that the arm of the Lord had brought them to this valley; that they lived by faith; that they dug for no gold save that which lay concealed in potato hills and corn rows; that the curse of a new country was gold fever, etc.
